I'ln the war with Mexico, the whole American simy only sumbered 100,000 strong, of whom about 27,000 were regulars, and 73,000 volunteers.

When the war commenced, Gen. Taylor had no force but the Texas regulars, numbering something over 3500, on the south-western from ier, with whom he whipped the Mexicans at Palo Alto, Reszen de la Palma, and at Fort Br. wa. In no battle during the campaign did he have more than 6000 men under him-a number which secured him the brilliant victory achieved by the storming of Monterey. At Buena Vista he had but 517 regulars and 4400 volunteers. Vere Cruz was captured by a the force was 6000 regulars and 2500 volunlars and marines, and 1526 volunteers.
